

How to write an introduction to the course

research paper writing

Some sources advise to write an introduction to the course after writing the main part. But it is not very convenient, because it is the compilation that helps streamline in the head that will be in your work. In addition, some executives are asked to show them the introduction before writing the main part. Good introduction reveals the urgency of the chosen theme, defines the object, the subject, the purpose and objective of the study. In addition, in the introduction, as a rule, the degree of research is considered, the theoretical and practical significance of the topic studied is determined.

Step 5. Main part.

Since the bulk of most course works consists of two chapters - theoretical and practical - this stage of work on the course is overcome in two approaches. First you understand the theoretical side of the question, compare various points of view, do not forget to make your own conclusions. Do not forget about links to used sources - immediately marry what they got from.

Then spend a practical research on the topic and make it up in accordance with the requirements of the subject of the subject. Each head of the course is divided into subpowers or paragraphs and usually contains from two to five pounds.

Step 6. Conclusion.

A good conclusion contains basic conclusions on chapters, as well as recommendations and suggestions.

Step 7. Registration of the literature.

A lot of teachers pay attention to how the list of references is decorated, how many sources in it and whether all the sources that you used in the course work were included in the bibliography. When decorated, focus on the GOST, proposed by the university, and also make sure that the sources in the list are no less than you recommended the teacher.

Step 8. Registration and verification of finished work.

Carefully read the text design method and give your work in line with the requirements. Later you learn how to do it immediately while writing work. If required, application application. Check for errors and you can give to further verification to the teacher.

Step 9. Currency protection.

Currency protection can pass differently. Somewhere you just ask a couple of questions for your work. In another case, you may recommend to make a report and a presentation to protection. Whatever the way to protect the course, successfully pass this test to you will help you attentive to study your work and its main points. If you are in the topic, then you will not be difficult to protect you.

The execution of a series of consecutive actions will lead you to success. Over time, the course will cease to be a problem for you.
